GEMS FOR THE FAIR

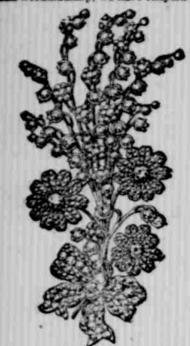

Fashions in Jewelry for the Coming Season.

NOTHING IS TOO STARTLING

Tiffany Predicts the Incoming Modes. The Correct Engagement Ring. Evening Wear.

Nine hundred millions of dollars worn in gems by the American women! Our ters from the hand of "Orient pearl" nor our royal sisters on contal thrones have never boasted of glorious wealth to compare with thisad still the end is not yet.

cast, outstripped the west and it would treasures of the earth can do no more, having touched perfection.

Yet this I hear from Tiffany, in whose laboratories labor the magi of fairy lore: "Yes, our designs are becoming more and more elaborate. This winter will see finer workmanship, more mag niticent styles and a steadier demand for the most expensive pieces than this house has ever produced before."

Then I asked a foolish question. I wanted to know what the styles are to As though there could be styles, when the fancy for spending money is running riot in our veins! Certain phases of magnificence are going to be popular, though, and after two hours' gazing at gems I drew some generaliza-

The most popular stones will be pearls and emeralds; the latter especially will be set in everything-rings, hair ornaments, hatpins and lace pins. Deep, rich gold setting is used with emeralds;

white gold, silver and platinum is the thing for diamonds, pearls and rubies. Opals and torqueise hold their own, especially in the fashionable marquise

Women are wearing as many rings as they can crowd upon their fingers, and there is no danger of being termed vulgar and estentations if the rings are the best of their kind. Fancy pearls will be greatly in vogue on pretty One ring I saw was made of three bands—to represent three separate frames and in each was set a very large colored pearl and two diamonds You may hadge of its massiveness when I add that it covered my fluger snugly to the foint. Unique, new designs are most in demand. The solitaire is going out. Even for engagement tokens men are heatowing rings with two and three large stones in them.

Nocklasses are chiefly of pearls and time through which the two kinds of gems ran at random is nearly three inches wide. It is worth $4,000. A diamond spray of margnerites and lillies of the valley is like the work of some gend king. A princess might give all her wester to possess it, so magmillowest and yet so chaste it is. the setting. The spray weights quite a pound, yet so defitly is it set that the filles' stems trend back and forth with the motion of the wearer. Its cost is $4,500, and it is 6% inches long by 8 Flower designs are very popu lar and will be much worn this winter There are many of them in the fash louable tiars, although in these the impertal designs of fleur de lis and coroneted patterns hold their own.

A very new design in tiarus, which will prove immensely becoming upon a low forehead and dark waved hair, is modeled after the royal Egyptian fashion. The gods were it, and Cleopatra's witchery shone beneath its graceful curves. And that brings me the sacred beetle, which is imitated in life size more perfectly than beautifully, I think. He is made of chrysolite and his legs and antennes are of chased gold, set with small diamonds. Alongside crawls a little lizard with constipation. Symp of Figs is the central row of diamonds down his only remedy of its kind ever proback and a row of green garnets on duced, pleasing to the taste and aceither side. His eyes glare out in red carnets, while his body appears ready to wiggle delightedly over the bodice of my lady's evening gown—just where he ought to be, in fact. This fad of insect wearing is really becoming stable enough to merit a reckoning. I suppose it is because birds and strange in popular remedy known. sects may be worn in such a variety of Syrup of Figs is for sale in 50c forms. gown or they may wing their way brough the air just above the beauty' brow, while so slender are the wires of her tiaras that one scarcely sees how support is given. These accommodating bleds will serve you in any way your ingenuity may suggest, and you need not pay more than six hundred dollars apiece for them.

A unique ornament for the hair con-sists of a high structure reared in gold and emeralds and diamonds. Each emerald is out in different shapes and beautifully "faceted." From the top of the ornament stands a dainty aig

But the most magnificent tiars I say baffles description and makes me long for command of another language. If I say pearls and diamonds, what does that mean to you now? Yet twelve thousand dollars still seems a nice sum. I suppose. But the pearls! Those huge globes of beauty and bitterness. Diamond seroll work curves lovingly about them and everywhere sends out little tendrils to close upon great gray gems, with pink and yellow lusters shining from their incomparable surfaces. The summit of the tiara is one perfect pearshaped gem an inch in length. The diamond bands do not touch it, as it stands alone and peerless. Beside this glorious work of artists lie the tiara of Empress Eugenie and the gift of a sultan to Gen. Sherman's daughter. Yet magnificent as they are this tiara of pearls from Lower California ranks first by right of beauty and the skill which brought it forth.
